

HOW TO SPOT A PIRATE

This is what a pirate uses to get from A to B, and spends the majority of their time on. A pirate ship holds many pirates, and is the origin of the saying 'smells like a boatload of pirates.'

Pirate. n. on a ship who pilages and plunders other ships at sea or participates in coastal raids.

Pirical. adj.
Grand fun

A cutlass is one of the many ways a pirate can get his point of view across.

Lost your eye in a fight? Need to go on to get your revenge? Can't afford a glass eye? Then maybe a eye patch is for you. Available in many fetching designs.

Pirates poison of choice and quite a versatile addition to any cooks pantry.

This fine peice of millinery is a must have for any self respecting pirate captain.

Like all really tough fellows, and fellowinas, pirates have many scars. When inspecting a pirates wounds, contemplation must be made of the person who caused these wounds and the state ion which they must be now. This is the appropriate moment to make a hasty retreat

If you see someone holding onto a ships wheel, then chances are, you are looking at a pirate. Proceed with caution.

LEXICON

Avast!: Gentleman, if I could have your attention, I have something rather urgent to communicate to you

Arrrr!: As a matter of fact, yes, in fact I would have thought the answer was obvious

Hearties!: Those colleagues with whom I have developed a close rapport as a result of the many trial and tribulations we have endured together

Rum!: Mainly, but not exclusively, distilled spirits in excess of 100% proof. Is also used to refer to various injustices that can be quite vexatious

Wench!: Young woman of child-bearing age who is not a members of the aristocracy and as such has a subservient social position relative to the men in her community.

Yaar!: Pardon me, are you attempting, by the use of that uncouth and disrespectful behaviour, to gain my attention?

Yo Ho Ho!: Oh yes, for now the hour of merriment is at hand

Cannons are one reason why it is wise to stay on the good side of pirates.

Another sure fire way to spot a pirate is by their footwear. Pirates love fancy boots and take great pride in the polishing of said boots.

A pirate with a wooden leg is a tough old rogue. You try balancing on one leg on a ship in a storm whilst cannons are firing.

WARNING:
Do not startle a pirate, they may take you to be a predator, and this WILL lead to the termination of your good self.